Aims and Scope:

International Politics Reviews seeks to be the premier source of refereed review articles and commentary in International Studies and IR; to maximize the usefulness and impact of each article by innovative use of print and online display and media; and to provide an unparalleled service to authors and readers.

International Politics Reviews publishes in-depth review articles which present authoritative and up-to-date surveys, synthesis and evaluation of the big questions and trends in the field concerning theory, world order and current debates. We seek not only to clarify major debates, but also to present new perspectives and insights, which in turn will help to shape the field in the future.

International Politics Reviews’ content is written by internationally renowned academics and researchers and targeted towards readers in international studies, IR, politics and the wider social sciences.

Review articles are designed to maximise the wider impact of the content. While intended to be read by academics and policymakers working in the fields above, we aim to make all our articles accessible to readers and teachers working in any social sciences discipline.

Online Features:

- Complete online archive available from 2013.
- Advance online publication - definitive, citable version of papers (complete with DOI) available online ahead of print.
- An International Politics Reviews subscription is only available with a subscription to International Politics (page 32)
- International Politics Reviews is included in Palgrave Open which offers authors of accepted papers the option to publish their articles with immediate open access upon publication. See page 53.

Users also benefit from all the online features outlined on page 3