Aims and Scope:

Palgrave Communications is an open access online-only journal dedicated to publishing high quality original research. The scope of the journal reflects Palgrave Macmillan’s strengths in the humanities, the social sciences and business. In addition to its multidisciplinary position, Palgrave Communications particularly welcomes interdisciplinary research, which fosters interaction between the rich disciplines that the journal encompasses.

We aspire to be the definitive peer-reviewed outlet for open access academic research in and between our subjects. Palgrave Communications is open to all theoretical and methodological perspectives. Palgrave Communications is committed to providing an efficient service for both authors and readers. All articles are subject to double-blind peer review, overseen and carried out by Editorial Board Members and experts they recommend. Prompt dissemination of accepted papers to Palgrave Macmillan’s wide readership and beyond is achieved through a fully online peer-review system and a program of continuous online publication on a new journal publishing platform. Published manuscripts are enhanced by innovative web technologies, including an enhanced article template and article level metrics.

Online Features:

• No format limits: We have removed the restrictions of print to word limits, color and figure charges: all articles that conform to the required editorial standards of the journal will be published regardless of length or supplementary content.
• Improved HTML full-text article view: In addition to PDF availability, the layout and navigation of online articles in HTML allows for an improved incorporation and display of figures and tables, video, multimedia and supplementary information.
• ReadCube: Enhanced PDFs will be available through ReadCube’s literature organisation and discovery tools.
• Article level metrics: Using Altmetric, authors can see how their research is being used and commented on across the web and social networks.
• Visibility and impact: Immediate and open online access to all articles published. Studies have shown that open access articles are more frequently cited than comparable subscription articles.
• Mandate compliance and author copyright retention: Palgrave Communications offers authors Creative Commons licensing ensuring compliance with a variety of funding mandates, as well as enabling authors to retain copyright in their work.

Open Access:

Palgrave Communications is an open access online-only journal. As the costs of publication are not recouped through a subscription charge, and to enable articles to be freely available to all online immediately upon publication, authors of accepted papers or their funding agencies pay an article processing charge. See www.palgrave-journals.com/palcomms/openaccess for more information.
