Polity is the journal of the Northeastern Political Science Association

Aims and Scope:

A lively, accessible, and provocative journal for scholarship of the highest quality across the discipline. Since its launch in 1968, Polity's content has reflected the full variety of approaches inherent in the study of politics. As journals have become more specialized and less accessible to many within the discipline of political science, Polity has remained universal. The journal aims to publish papers that promise to be "productive," that will stimulate debate—where new questions are asked and conventional assumptions are reconsidered.
