

Subjectivity: International Journal of Critical Psychology

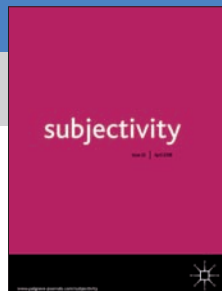

New to Palgrave Macmillan in 2008

www.palgrave-journals.com/sub

Editors: Lisa Blackman, Goldsmiths, University of London, UK; John Cromby, Loughborough University, UK; Derek Hook, London School of Economics, UK; Dimitris Papadopoulos, Cardiff University, UK and Valerie Walkerdine, Cardiff University, UK

2008: Issues 22-25 • 4 ISSUES PER YEAR

Print ISSN: 1755-6341 Online ISSN: 1755-635X

Subjectivity: International Journal of Critical Psychology explores the exciting new work being done in the field of critical psychology. Critical Psychology can be thought of as an umbrella term which describes a broad number of politically radical responses to and differences from mainstream psychology, spanning the left, feminism, ethnic and anti-racist politics, ecological movements and new forms of spirituality and radical work more generally conceived.

Readership

Critical psychology, health psychology, community psychology; sociology, media and cultural studies, social research and social theory, political theory; criminology, human geography, anthropology, health and psychosocial studies.

Online Features and Site License Access:

- Online archive available back to 2008
- A Site License provides access to all content published during the supply period. Access is granted to a further rolling four-year archive during the supply period only. Archive content not included in the licence agreement is available to purchase.
- Users benefit from all the online features outlined on pages 6-7