

Development

the movement of movements

Launch date: June 29th, London.
Contact s.allen@palgrave.com for details.

The global justice movement, born out of the 1999 Seattle protests is now a major global force mobilizing millions in the name of peace and social justice. Made up of diverse organizations - trade unionists, alternative development institutions, women's rights movements, environment and peace movements the 'movement of movements' is challenging the political and military face of neo-liberal globalization. Since it was first held in Port Alegre in 2000, the World Social Forum is now the meeting point for progressives and activists from around the world.

The articles are by and about the people who are shaping these progressive movements and organizations - their history, their challenges and their future. Throughout the issue there is a sense of serious self-reflection and of the enormity of the task. Above all there is a sense of hope that the fight against poverty, disease and environmental damage can be won with a new vision that goes beyond old hegemonies and old orders.
