

new editor appointed to the ECPR/OUP comparative politics series

doi:10.1057/palgrave.eps.2210183

After some seventeen years as co-editor of the ECPR/Oxford University Press Comparative Politics series, Ken Newton (University of Southampton) retired from the post on the 1 August 2007, to be replaced by David Farrell (University of Manchester). Professor Farrell will work alongside the continuing co-editor Alfio Mastropaolo (University of Turin).

Comparative Politics is a series for students and teachers of political science that deals with contemporary issues in comparative government and politics. As Comparative European Politics it produced a series of high-quality books following its foundation in 1990, but now takes on a broader form and title – Comparative Politics. As the process of globalisation proceeds, and as Europe becomes ever more enmeshed in world trends and events, it is necessary to expand the scope of the series.

HISTORY OF THE DEPARTMENT: FROM 1972 TO THE PRESENT

The Department of Politics, International Relations and European Studies (PIRES) has evolved from the Department of European Studies that was established in 1972. Over the past thirty-five years, the Department has established a strong record of research (rated '5' in the 2001 RAE) and teaching (awarded twenty-three out of twenty-four by the Quality Assurance Agency) in Politics, International Studies and language teaching, which until recently
