

You are warmly invited to the SECOND

feminist review | ANNUAL LECTURE

co-hosted by SOAS Centre for Gender Studies

How long does a war last?

Using a feminist curiosity to take stock of the Iraq war

---

PROFESSOR CYNTHIA ENLOE

A war doesn't simply end...and doesn't end simply.

With British forces withdrawing from Iraq and US forces scaling back, and with Western media turning away from Iraq, there's a temptation to imagine the Iraq War is "over."

In reality, Iraqi women, British and US women, in all their distinct conditions, each are being left to "pick up the pieces."

Those experiences of women need to be taken seriously if the actual "costs" of war are to be tallied and if a more realistic grasp of "security" is to be gained.

Tuesday 21st July 2009 • 6.00 - 8.30pm

Khalili Lecture Theatre • School of Oriental and African Studies • Thornhaugh Street • Russell Square • London WC1H 0XG